

Tips for Temps...

Follow our tips on how to get the most out of your temporary placement.

- Be clear on experience.

When applying to an agency, make sure you have a detailed conversation with your recruiter so they know your 'best assignment' criteria, however to maintain regular work try to remain interested and willing to any work your recruiter may have to offer.

- Be approachable and flexible

As a temporary worker, you may be filling in for someone who is off sick or on holiday ect. Or you may be used to complete some tasks that others are not available to do. Keep an open mind and show the employer you are willing to help wherever.

"I moved into the area just over a year ago now and was keen to get some temporary work.

- Ask questions, be engaged.

When the employer is explaining the role, showing you around, you want to ensure you complete the placement to the best of your ability. Ask questions if you do not understand. Be engaged with the employer when they are explaining the role at hand.

I signed up with numerous agencies at the time but Search Recruitment really took the time in my resignation to get to know me as a person and listen to my working requirements. I didn't feel rushed and which automatically made me feel at ease.

- Always remember the 3 C's

Do not criticise, condemn or complain. If something is wrong wait until you finish your shift and lean on your agency to address the issue. Recruiters act as a great buffer and will, in most cases be able to rephrase the request in a way that will diffuse any difficult situation that may have arisen.

You can't help but feel welcome when you visit the office as all of the staff at Search Recruitment are so friendly and helpful. I really didn't feel just like 'another candidate on the books'.

I am happy to say the Search has placed me in various temporary bookings over the last year or so and it's very reassuring to work for an agency that care just as much about their candidates as they do about their clients."

REMEMBER

A job well done = future bookings.

CALL NOW 01252 372 525

Speak to one of our experienced consultants today